N. NELISON. HARVARD MEN AS "SUPERS."

HOW THEY GO TO OPERA.

The Senator from Maine in a Box Whi

"What a fine body of supernumera-ries," remarked a lady to her escort Friday evening, at the Boston Theatre, during a tableau of the opera "Semiramide." "Why, I really believe that, in spite of his make-up, that is Mr.

"If you promise not to give it away I'll tell you all about it," replied her companion. "You were right in your guesses. That young fellow dressed as a guardsman is Billy —, and almost all those priests you see to the right are Harvard men. It's strange you never heard of 'suping.' Why, it's just the thing whenever the opera comes. You see it's great fun to get on the stage and have a good look at Patti and Neilson and Sembrich, and all the great singers. Besides, one gets a sight of society people in the audience, while a hundred ever suspects who you are. But last year Senator - of Maine, had the very box we are in this evening. The opera was 'La Giaconda,' You remember Neilson and Sembrich and Fursch-Mahdi were in it. There were at least a dozen Harvard men as 'supers' that night. Some were soldiers, and had to march down men, peasants, and so on. happened that Senator —'s son was suping' that night, and you can judge of his astonishment when looking about he saw his father, mother, and sisters at the theatre, when he thought they were in Portland. He was the boatman in the second act, and had the pleasure of rowing Neilson and Sembrich almost under his father's nose. His make-up was extremely picturesque, white trousers, striped shirt with sleeves rolled up, and a red bandanna tied about his head He was anything but in full dress attire. Now, his mother is noted for her dig-nity and sense of propriety, and to say that she was shocked at the unexpected sight is putting it mild. "There was a time when Harvard men were tabooed off the stage. It happened in this way : Sometime ago-I think it must be nearly four years-Colonel Mapleson brought out a fine cast at the Boston or Globe-I've forgotten which. In the repertoire was 'L'Africaine.' No expense was spared to make the opera a success. Every detail was attended to. The stage setting was perfect, and, to crown all, twenty-five Harvard men offered themselves to the Colonel as 'supers' for the evening. Now, Colonel Mapleson was proud of the appearance of these 'supers'—all athletic and of fine phy-sique—and had them at rehearsal, for these men to board ship, to be REPULSED AMID GREAT CARNAGE. "The effect of the tableau depended they had been invited. He said they on the realness of the attack. So when had received no cards. I answered that the night of the opera came around the theatre was packed, and everything went on brilliantly until the time for the went on brilliantly until the time for the fight. The curtain went up and showed list, and that I had handed the list to a large ship with her broadside presented | Mrs. Chambers. toward the audience. After the prehas been suffering for many years with that dreadful affliction known as Female Disease, which has 'cost me many dollars and not-which has 'cost me many dollars and not-which has 'cost me many dollars, were completely turned. Instead my friends. She said she would send it requires. But there are better things of being vanquished, the Harvard men, blackened and dressed to represent natives, had a merry time of it pitching the astonished scamen overboard. Then they fell to tearing up the ship, and in a twinkle of an eye the stage presented a sorry sight of scattered timbers and canvas. Of course the scene was spoiled, and the curtain was hastily rung down, not on a chorus of exulting seamen, but on a band of yelling savages. The worst of it was the joke on the poor Colonel himself, who was obliged to step before that he would not allow those parties the curtain and apologize for the misbehavior of his Harvard supers. So it happened that Harvard men were not wanted to do heavy opera for the rest of that season. "On another more recent occasion at a very impressive part of the scene in some opera, a king was to drive on the stage seated in a chariot. Well, as is usual in such affairs, the chariot had to be hauled along by means of ropes and pulleys. A couple of Harvard boys were detailed to do this work. Nicolini was the king, and at the proper time took his place in the gilded concern that was intended to represent the chariot in question. When the signal was given the fellows pulled on the ropes, but paying more attention to the charms of a couple of pretty ballet-girls than to the work they were doing, the chariot caught on the edge of the scenery, and Nicolini was pitched in a very unceremonious manner head first on the stage. He picked himself up and continued his part in an apparently unconcerned condition of mind, but when off the stage the air was blue with heathenish Italian. "On such nights as this applications for 'suping' are numerous, and it is both easy and profitable for the stagedoorkeeper to make his choice. For ordinary plays where 'supers' are required they are taken from persons about the theatre, and are usually paid, but for operas, where a larger number is required, and where the applications exceed the demand, it is not unusual to pay for the privilege of appearing on the stage. Opera weeks HARVARD MEN APPLY IN LARGE NUMBERS, and fee the doorkeeper handsomely. Sometimes the fellows go in when the tragedians come round. I remember the experience of a classmate of mine who went on the stage one night as one of Richard III.'s valiant soldiers. Being very near-sighted he had left his spectacles on while behind the scenes, and in the hurry of taking his station on the stage he forgot to take them off. The audience quickly 'caught on' to the incongruity of a mail-clad warrior in the Middle Ages wearing spectacles to battle, and a perceptible titter ran through the house. Take off those glasses, came in an angry whisper from between the flies, but how could a man with a pair of tin gloves on take off a pair of spectacles? There was but one way out of it, and that was for him to flee, so Bichard had one less soldier in the battle that night.

"What do the 'supers' do when they get behind the scenes? Well, first they are drawn up in line and marched down under the stairs to a dimly-lighted, dusty room, where the property-Halifax Record. man has a locker where the attendant puts his clothes. After donning the various costumes the 'supers' are sent | world. St. Jacobs Oil would have back to the stage, where they are taken | cured his scald.

mance out of the theatre. The paint on the faces of actors and actresses is altogether too apparent near to, and the ballet-girls from being visions of loveliness become very plain and far from bashful persons. As for the 'supers' garments, they are usually very un-comfortable, especially if armor is supers' are allowed to stand in only one wing, where the chances for a good view of the stage are very small.

"You can neither see nor hear to ad-vantage, and it is only the occasional glance at the divas and the knowledge of the practical working of the stage that repays one for the trouble. You ask me how I know all this. Well. I've been there myself."

A MARRIAGE BROKEN OFF. The Trivial Cause that Separated Two Loving

[Philadelphia News.]

The following advertisement ap-peared in a local morning paper on Monday : Georgie Chambers and Dr. Willis H. Hunt, of Camden, have been withdrawn. John S. Chambers, 309 Market street, Camden. This advertisement was the sequel of lover's quarrel. Dr. Willis H. Hunt is one of the finestlooking men in Camden. He is also a successful physician, with offices in Camden at No. 315 Market street. comes of an old Jersey family, his father, Dr. John Hunt, having practiced medi-cine for many years in Camden county.

Miss Georgie Chambers, for two or three years, has been known as one of the belles of Camden, and, although she will not be eighteen years of age until the 13th of the present month, she is as much a woman as many young ladies several years her senior. She is a decidedly pretty girl.

DR. HUNT'S EXPLANATION.

"The engagement," said Dr. Hunt but I am sorry Mr. Chambers has seen fit to give it this needless publicity. I don't blame Miss Chambers, for I think she is not in fault. I believe the whole thing is a piece of her mother's work-a case of too much prospective mother-in-law-and it all arose out of a difficulty about issuing the invitations to the wedding.

"You see, Mrs. Chambers showed ne a list of those she wanted to be present at the ceremony early last week and asked me to give her the names of any persons whom I wished to have present, and I gave her a number of names the next day. Among the names I handed her were those of a young tended a very short time ago. The invitations were sent out, and I supposed everything was all right until a friend topped me last Thursday on the street and inquired why I had not asked Mr and Mrs. ----, the couple I just menthere must have been some mistake or some accident, for I was certain that

"Thursday night I called around to them two cards at once, and I withdrew, feeling comfortable, for I was content that everything would be made perfectly straight. "On Saturday I learned that two more names of gentlemen on my list had been crossed off, and on Sunday I called at Mr. Chambers's house to learn what I could about these strange proceedings. Mrs. Chambers told me that Georgie had decided to withhold invitations from a number of my friends. I asked Georgie why. Her father replied to enter his house. I replied that then there would be no wedding; and with-out uttering another word I put on my hat and coat, picked up my cane, left the room, and walked out the front door into Market street. The next thing I knew this advertisement appeared in the paper."

ANOTHER GIRL IN THE CASE. "Georgie is in," said Miss Sallie Chambers, sister of the bride that was to be, when the door-bell was answered, "but she won't see any one, No. I don't think there are any more particulars about the matter that . I could give you. The cards are withdrawn and that ends it."

The mother of Dr. Hunt's affiances said that the Doctor and Georgie had a squabble, and that the advertisement withdrawing the cards was printed by Mr. Chambers. "That's all I'll say, said Mrs. Chambers.

All the presents on both sides have been returned; but it is whispered that a reconciliation will take place and the overs be united after all, despite cards, advertisements, or maternal objections.

Shot Bend by His Wife.

A Bath (Me.) special says : Arnold C. Stacy, who lived on the outskirts of the city, was shot dead last night during a family quarrel. Stacy was proprietor of the Crystal mineral spring, purchasing it about three years ago, at which time a residence was erected at considerable expense. He became financially embarrassed about a year ago and the property was transferred to his wife. A few weeks ago the debt was cleared and he wished to become the possessor of the property, but the wife refused to turn it over. At the suppertable to-night, so Mrs. Stacy her husband renewed his demand, using threatening language. Fearing violence. Mrs. Stacy arose from the table and from a drawer in the pantry adjoining led in special prayer. the kitchen took a revolver that was kept by her for defence in his absence, as the house is quite a distance from any residence. She states that he took hold of the barrel, when the weapon was discharged, the bullet entering his

There is something beautifully pathetic in the average constitutional stickler who immolates himself and his constituency upon the altar of a grand and heroic theory, but Virginia and the South do not need sentimental politics nor hair-splitting distinctions upon legal points. What we need and must have is a broad, comprehensive, practical, common-sense grasping of these ques-tions which so materially affect us.

The tea-kettle turned over on the little boy and he's called to a better D. L. Moody.

MR. D. L. MOODY'S MEETINGS.

It is impossible to report the Moody meetings without a frequent use of the same terms, as there is sameness in the rush of seats and the incidents connected therewith. Mr. Moody has gotten the attention of the city and of the surrounding country completely, and the crowd at each service is limited only by the capacity of the hall.

Yesterday afternoon was no exception to the rule, and half an hour before the time for the service the hall was packed to its utmost capacity.

Mr. Moody took charge of the meeting and showed his generalship in getting every one in the congregationplatform, floor, and galleries all uniting—to join in the singing. But when he asked the choir to rest, and put the vast crowd on "Nearer, My God, to Thee," there went up a volume of sacred song such as is rarely heard.

At 2:45 a part of the choir were sent to the "overflow" meeting at Cente-nary church, conducted by Rev. George C. Needham, and Mr. Moody at once had their vacant seats filled by those standing in the aisles.

Rev. Otis Glazebrook, of the University of Virginia, and Rev. J. B. Turpin, of Charlottesville, led in prayer. THE SERMON. Mr. Moody said that he would call attention to some new things a man will have when he becomes God's child: 1. He will have, as shown in the third chapter of John, a new heart. He regarded no doctrine more fully taught in God's Word than that of the new birth. He brought this out clearly and fully. "Whosoever is born of God overcometh the world," and the man who is doing this has this evidence of the new birth.

He allow some sneering skeptic to laugh insisted on the absolute necessity of them into hell. We ought to be the new birth, and of its transcendent ashamed of ourselves, but never importance above every other question. age," but far above all "reforms of God's spirit.

2. The converted man is a "new reature "-a new man in new clothes, and everything seems new to him.

better. He illustrated the expulsive power of vital godliness in the heart by the story | Christ. of a lady who wanted to discuss with him before her conversion the propriety of going to the theatre. He declined to enter into the discussion, telling her that the one thing for her to do was to go to Christ for salvation, to become a real Christian, and then, if she wanted to go to the theatre and could glorify God by doing so, to go by all means, him afterwards that she had lost all taste for theatre-going, as she had found something better in the service of Christ,

So he once told a distiller who objected to something he had said against the liquor traffic that if he could sell whiskey to the glory of God by all means to do so. But he would advise him first to test the matter by rolling out one hundred barrels of whisker and then praying over them that God would bless their mission and intensify their effects. He afterwards concluded that he could not do this, and quit the

5. He will give us a new tongue, and put new songs in our mouth. When church is cold they are willing for four people and a big organ to lead the mubut when they are revived they want all to join in singing God's praise.

6. We want new food. The Bible will be a new book to the true convert-the bread on which his soul will constantly feed. 7. He will want new friends and new associations. A really converted man will want to join the church, because he will find there congenial spirits.

8. And finally he will have a new body and a new home. He made a striking summing-up o the above points, and earnestly urged each one out of Christ to come and seek after these "new things" by simple

This meeting was conducted by Mr. Moody. The choir led the congregation in a delightful "service of song." Rev. Dr. Curry, Rev. George C. Needham, Mr. Clarke (secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association), Rev. Dr. Blackwell, and Mr. Moody

A large number of petitions for prayer for friends were sent up, a num-ber of people all over the house stood up to ask for special prayer, and there were few dry eyes in the vast throng. Programme of Future Meetings.
After the meeting yesterday after noon there was a conference of the ministers, at which it was decided to hold next Tuesday and Wednesday forenoons a Christian convention, to be conducted by Mr. Moody; and the following programme was adopted:

Tuesday, January 13.—10 to 11:

And so the professed Christian who is ashamed to show his colors, who tries to be a Christian seworld and the Church.

The difficulty with many men is that they have not the moral courage to stand up for their principles, but will ashamed of Christ.

What we want is Christian men and women who will talk for Christ at home, in their places of throughout the city.

He illustrated further by the case of Joseph of Aramathea, who, while for a long time a secret disciple, was yet helped by God's spirit to come forward at the darkest hour of the world's history, confess Christ before men, give up all his friends, and, in the face of popular opinion and popular opposition, begged the body of Jesus and gave him burial in his new sepulchre.

It is hereby earnestly recommended that Christian people give more room at the Armory to outsiders. Hundreds for whose benefit these services ought to be chiefly intended are crowded out by members of the churches. They feel it and they complain of it. On Wednesday night a number anxious to be prayed for could not get inside the door. Christ pleased not Himself. Christians ought to be Christlike. They are not so, however, if in this instance they use their better chance of access to their pastors to get all the tickets for themselves. I blame no one for wishing to enjoy these meetings, but plead for the exercise of a Christlike spirit of self-denial. I would especially suggest that on Sunday all Christian people be at their Sunday schools and churches. They

Not That Winans-Another Winans

A Baltimore telegram of the 8th says: The cable dispatch published yesterday stating that Ross R. Winans, the wealthy Baltimorean, had been vigorously denounced by London Truth for oppressing the Scottish crofters, is a curious and stupid blunder. The Winans referred to is William L., a grand-uncle of Mr. Winans, of this
